++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A cloudy day for many with outbreaks of rain, these heavy and persistent across parts of eastern Scotland with flooding likely. It will be windy too, especially across the northeast and southwest of the UK where coastal gales are expected. There will be some drier weather overnight, however, more wet and windy weather will arrive across southwestern Britain by morning.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Rain will spread to northeastern Britain during Sunday, with sunny intervals and showers following, heavy at times. Rain and hill snow will continue across the northeast on Monday with sunshine and showers further southwest. It will stay windy for most.
