

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

A developing area of low pressure is expected to track north across the UK through the weekend. The heaviest rainfall is currently expected to develop on the western flank of the low, with west Wales, southwest Scotland and eastern parts of Northern Ireland now looking most at risk from widespread 20 to 40 mm of rain, and locally perhaps exceeding 50 mm in 12 hours.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:15 on Sat, 02nd Aug 2014 until 23:45 on Sat, 02nd Aug 2014

An area of rain is expected to push north across the UK through Saturday. The rain will be persistent and sometimes heavy, especially across western areas at first, and later over northern areas. There remains some uncertainty in the eastward extent across England and Wales, and then, during the afternoon and evening, how far the rain will push into Scotland and Northern Ireland. The most persistent rain will clear Wales early in the day.

The public are advised to be aware of the risk of disruption to travel and outdoor activities due to localised surface water flooding.
