

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

From late Tuesday morning showers are expected to develop across parts of the east and southeast of England.

Whilst many will miss the worst of the rain, the heaviest showers could bring 25 mm in an hour to some spots with 40 mm in 3 hours possible.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:00 on Tue, 08th Aug 2017 until 21:00 on Tue, 08th Aug 2017

Showers are expected to develop on Tuesday.

Where these occur they are likely to be heavy, slow moving and perhaps thundery. Some areas may miss the showers entirely whilst others could see 2 to 3 hours of heavy rain.

Where this occurs some disruption is possible such as localised flooding of roads.
