

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

An area of heavy showers and thunderstorms developing over France during Saturday may move northwards to affect at least parts of eastern and southeastern England later on Saturday or early on Sunday. There remains marked uncertainty concerning the extent of these heavy showers and thunderstorms, with there being a chance that they could also spread into parts of southern and central England. However, at this stage southeastern England is thought to be at the greatest risk of being affected.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Sat, 27th Jul 2013 until 06:00 on Sun, 28th Jul 2013

Heavy showers or thunderstorms may affect at least some southeastern and eastern parts of England later on Saturday or during early Sunday.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised disruption to travel due to surface water flooding.
