

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

An occluded front, although weakening, is crossing Scotland and will encounter cold air in its southeastward passage this morning. 5-10 cm of snow is possible in places above 200-300 m, especially across the northwest, but 2 cm possible to lower levels inland.

Widespread subzero surfaces will also lead to icy stretches forming on untreated surfaces, especially where lying snow exists.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 08:15 on Sat, 27th Dec 2014 until 12:00 on Sat, 27th Dec 2014

Showers will continue to fall as snow on hills and higher routes and to lower levels inland this morning. With surfaces widely below freezing ice is also expected to form on untreated surfaces.

The public should be aware of the expected icy conditions, especially where lying snow exists and over lower lying areas where rain has fallen, and that this is likely to result in some disruption to transport.

This is an update to the warning issued on Friday and expands the area of concern to include the Western Isles.
