Wind

Between
03:00 Thu 29 Nov 2018 and
14:00 Thu 29 Nov 2018

A spell of wet and windy weather is expected, with a very small chance of very strong and disruptive winds.

What to expect

- Some delays to road, rail, air and ferry transport are likely with some journeys taking longer. There is the chance of some cancellations as well as some road/bridge closures.
- Some short term loss of power and other services is possible
- It's likely that some coastal routes, sea fronts and coastal communities affected by spray and/or large waves with a small chance of injuries from large waves and beach material being thrown onto sea fronts, coastal roads and properties.

Further details

A weather system will move northeastwards across the UK on Thursday bringing widespread strong winds. Inland gusts of 50 mph are likely with gusts of around 65 mph in exposed locations around Wales and western England.

There remains a very small chance that this system will intensify as it moves northeastwards bringing even stronger winds to southwest England, Wales and on into northern England and southeast Scotland.

If this occurs, gusts of 70-80 mph could be seen, mainly in exposed locations.

In either case, winds will moderate by late morning across western England and Wales, then by mid afternoon across northern England and southeast Scotland.

Heavy rain is also likely to affect southern and western England as well as Wales, and following on from recent wet weather this may lead to some very localised surface water flooding.

Reason for update

The warning has been pulled further eastwards along southern England and is now for a medium likelihood of low impacts.
